Note: "California Water" – For six decades, the State of California has debated how to best move water from North to South while balancing water reliability for users with protecting the environment, economy, and culture of the Sacramento–San Joaquin Delta. This course covers the history of California water development and environmental transformation and then focuses on the science, economics, and politics underlying the current decision with respect to the construction of a peripheral tunnel around the Delta. The benefits and costs of such a major long-term investment are clouded by the uncertainties of climate change.

Note: "Climate Change Mitigation and Impacts: Technologies and Policies Needed to Limit Atmospheric Temperature Increase 2 Degrees Celsius by the year 2050" – This course will explore the adaptation and mitigation components of climate change research, the magnitude of increase in temperature due to different emissions scenarios, identify energy technologies to reduce emissions; describe challenges to marketing and the role of policies to speed up deployment, in order to limit the temperature increase. This course will provide a forum for the development of original written material that challenges current hypotheses and presents alternative theories.

			Note: "The Sacred: Images, Texts, Theories" – The Sacred has become a key term in recent debates in a number of disciplines. However, what is at its core is often astonishingly undefined, open and ambivalent. Important theories of the Sacred have been articulated in the 20th century by Otto, Eliade, Caillois, Benjamin, Bataille, Auerbach, Feigl, Girard, Ricoeur, Smith and Agamben. In this course we will discuss a range of medieval and early modern,
37379	P 212A	001 SEM	W 2-4P	282 DWINELLE	Topics in Romanticism	4	TANG, C	NONE
			Note: 'Romanticism' is a scintillating concept in German and European literary history. This seminar will approach it from a variety of perspectives that have developed during the past decades, addressing issues such as political romanticism, green romanticism, romantic science, the romantic constellation of words, images and music, as well as the romantic legacy in European high modernism.
37380	P 256	001 SEM	W 12-2P	104 GPB	Problems of Literary Theory	4	FELDMAN, K S	NONE
			Note: This course will consider various literary-theoretical approaches to the question of how textual interpretation is mediated by reception. Thus it will investigate to what degree formal and aesthetic textual analysis is conditioned by historical factors, and also how historical interpretation is conditioned by assumptions about literary form. We will read authors in the German tradition of reception theory (e.g. Iser, Jauss); literary formalism (e.g. Shklovsky); and deconstruction (e.g. de Man); as well as some classic authors of German literary and historical thought (e.g. Koselleck, Staiger, Blumenberg).

			Note: "Hybrid Methodology to Define the Structure, Assembly and Dynamics of Large Macromolecular Assemblies" - A full understanding of the macromolecular transactions underlying cellular function requires a description of the dynamic organization of the molecular machines involved. Today, no single structural biology technique can provide such description. We will discuss recent literature where crystallography, molecular electron microscopy, crosslinking and/or mass spectrometry, SAXS and other methodologies, where pooled together to define the structure and dynamics of essential molecular machines.

			Note: "Regulation of Axon Guidance" - The ability of axon growth cones to navigate through the nervous system to find their synaptic targets is an essential step in generating the wiring that mediates behavior. We will discuss papers that describe the molecules that mediate growth cones navigation and how these molecules are regulated.

			Note: "Cosmopolitanism and the Southeast Asian City" – This seminar examines the interconnected histories of Southeast Asia's cosmopolitan cities and the people who shaped them, from smugglers to exiles, migrants to revolutionaries. We trace the emergence of social, commercial, and intellectual networks stretching from the Indian Ocean to the South China Sea. We explore a number of cities through the lenses of technological change, modernity, multiculturalism, changing class and gender relations, memory, and aspirations for world–city status.
