			Note: "New Frontiers in Development Studies" – This capstone course is for seniors and advanced juniors in Development Studies. The course introduces students to new areas of scholarship in the field. Topics include: the merging of development and security, the militarization of humanitarianism, global counterinsurgencies, the global land grab, community and grassroots development, the commodification of nature in green industries, and global environmental and heritage conservation. This is a theoretically rigorous, reading-intensive seminar, including concepts such as territorialization, security, dispossession, histories of the present and biopolitics.

			Note: "California Water" – For six decades, the State of California has debated how to best move water from North to South while balancing water reliability for users with protecting the environment, economy, and culture of the Sacramento–San Joaquin Delta. This course covers the history of California water development and environmental transformation and then focuses on the science, economics, and politics underlying the current decision with respect to the construction of a peripheral tunnel around the Delta. The benefits and costs of such a major long–term investment are clouded by the uncertainties of climate change.

			Note: "Behavior and Sustainability" – The aggregated effects of billions of individual decisions each day have large adverse effects on human and ecosystem health, natural resource stocks, and global climate change. While the causes of environmental degradation are anthropogenic, so too are the solutions. This course examines different perspectives on the motivations of human behavior, drawing on diverse disciplines, including psychology, economics, and sociology. Theories of behavior change and behavioral intervention case studies will inform student efforts to design viable programs that promote improved sustainability through behavior change.

Note: "Men of Color in the United States" – This seminar will explore the social construction of male identity in relation to race, culture, class, and sexuality. Using autobiographies, fiction, essays, history, social research and theory, film/videos, and personal experiences, the class will make a comparative examination of how men of color experience the life cycle — from childhood, through adolescence and adulthood, to becoming elders. We will explore men's relationships with women, their families, their communities, and the dominant society.

Note: This course will examine the literary and cultural productions of Arab and Arab American writers and artists in relation to the major historical and political events that have taken place in the United States and the Arab world in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The course explores the ways in which literature and culture become alternative spaces for contesting identity and informing political action as well as negotiating cross-cultural, cross-racial and ethnic relations in the United States.

Note: SATISFIES AMERICAN CULTURES REQUIREMENT; "Race/Ethnicity and the East Bay Since 1965" – This course examines the racialized shifts in the political economy of the East Bay, anchored by the city of Oakland, emphasizing the period since 1965. The course intends to focus on the intersections within that region of the following trends which frame its development: movement of the non-minority population to the suburban areas (white flight); the influx of new Asian immigrants, particularly Southeast Asians; the increase in Latino immigrants, especially Mexican newcomers; and the course will also address the implications of these shifts for the African American communities of the region.

Note: Designed for upper–level and graduate students, this course explores qualitative management principles and techniques within various kinds of organizations. The goal is to provide students with a sense of what an enterprise is, why it exists, how it is led and governed, how it is organized, and how it is measured. It will explore the nature of organizations, with primary (but not exclusive) focus on corporations, and the management techniques necessary for those organizations to succeed, and for individuals to succeed within them.

Note: "Product Management Essentials" – Too often we are so enamored in our brilliant ideas, we skip the most important part: building products consumers will want and use. Precious time and effort is wasted on engineering perfect products only to launch to no users. It takes work to validate an idea and turn it into a fully–fledged service users will value and love. This course teaches product management skills such as attributes of great product managers, reducing risk and cost while accelerating time to market, product life cycle, stakeholder management and effective development processes. Class will be held at 2150 Shattuck Avenue, Skydeck Penthouse.

Note: "New Media for Global Poverty Action" – Students explore different forms of media to document, represent and communicate their research on social justice issues and/or Global Poverty and Practice fieldwork. Students will be introduced to online research methods and approaches for posting accurate, timely and engaging web content through both old and new storytelling techniques. All students will launch a website and blog utilizing coursework on basic interviewing and reporting practices, a variety of visual representation forms, and how to utilize social media for creating web presence and cultivating readership. No prior web experience necessary.

Note: "Markets and Missions: A Practicum on Social Enterprise" – This is a project–based course which critically and creatively examines social entrepreneurship, both in its for–profit and non–profit forms, as a tool in the service of a world without poverty. Lectures will address the broad range of ethical, strategic and on–the–ground tactical realities which challenge and confront social change agents. This class begins meeting on Monday, January 28 and ending on March 18, 2013.

Note: "New Approaches to Crises and Political Transition in the Middle East and Africa" – Recent crises in the Middle East and Africa (coups, electoral violence, revolutions and uprisings) are increasingly being addressed by a combination of local, regional and international actors in innovative and complex ways. While the point of departure for each country is starkly different, the emerging norm is for complex political transitions leading to the return of constitutional government. This course examines the mechanics of transition through a comparative approach and scrutinizes the roles of the United Nations, African Union and the League of Arab Nations.

Note: "Food Fights: The Political Economy of Food" – Food is critical to our survival. Yet, there are people throughout the world who do not have access to sufficient and/or healthy food. A number of social movements focused on food–related issues have sprouted up in both the Global North and the Global South in recent decades. In this course, we will examine the national and international political and economic dynamics that shape production, distribution and access to healthy food, as well as a number of the social movements that have emerged, their critiques of the key actors involved in shaping food markets and the solutions they offer.

Note: "Resist, Occupy, Create!: Latin American Social Movements Transforming Society and Politics" – Social movement activity in Latin America has exploded over the last two decades. We will examine the demands for a reconceptualization of democracy, alliances between social movements and left-leaning governments; inequalities and tensions within movements; and the transnational nature of this movement activity. As we discuss each of these themes, you will learn about active social movements in Latin America today, what they are struggling for, what challenges they have confronted and how they have changed society and politics.

Note: This course explores the intersection of media and social change through the lenses of law, history, ethics and aesthetics. The course will focus not only on mass media representations of political change, but also "bottom–up" (or as we like to say at Berkeley, "counter–hegemonic") representations through, e.g., political posters, graffiti, music, photography, investigative and citizen journalism, and movement tracts. We will look at everything from the muckraking journalism of the 19th century, to 1960's civil rights photographs, to slave songs, gospel, punk and hip hop, to the Tweets of Arab Spring and the livestreams of Occupy and more.

We examine the impact of civil disobedience, political activism, defiance, and social media since Iran's Green Movement in 2009 and Arab uprisings in 2011. Our main focus will be on the youth and the emancipatory potential of a digital world.

Note: "The Role of History in Biology" – Development is the process by which we progress from egg to adult. Mechanisms of development have been elucidated using organisms such as the fruitfly, but understanding the differences among animals requires that we appreciate how development changes in evolution. In this seminar, we will explore these ideas. Instructor approval is required. Interested students should email a paragraph or two describing their background and interests to weisblat@berkeley.edu. Please use MCB84 as the subject in the email. You will be notified if you are admitted to the class.

Note: "How Brains Make Up Their Minds" – How do we exercise our will? How do we control our behavior and make sense of the chaotic world around us? These are age-old questions. What makes it worthwhile to ask them again is the growth of neuroscience in the past half century. New techniques for brain imaging show that genes and environments alone don't determine all that goes on in our brains. We create ourselves through our actions and the choices we make in facing the consequences of our behaviors. We'll see how brains work.

Note: "Leadership, Dialog and Actualization" - This class is for leaders who want to combine inner work with increased sensitivity to ideas, feelings and concerns of others to actualize visions for their organizations within changing situations. Several types of dialog will be introduced and practiced. Each leader will go through the Vision Actualization Process that articulates a vision for a healthy community, to better connect one's inner resources with external circumstances. Interactive exercises will be used to explore methodologies for social action, community partnerships, project management. Go to tinyurl.com/pacs119 to get a Class Entry Code.

71203	P 24	001 SEM	W 3-4P	107 MULFORD (effective 02/06/13)	Freshman Seminar Note: "Rogues, Scoundrels and Citizens: Political Economy of Smuggling and Piracy" – This course examines four popular crimes: piracy, smuggling, drug trade and corruption, from historical and political economy perspectives. Students will read recent non-fiction (but incredibly fun) works in this area, as well as examine original historical records. The seminar aims to teach students how to evaluate these crimes against the state while giving the opportunity to connect past and present, an important skill to have in international social science education. Freshman interested in the connection between history and other social sciences are encouraged to apply.	1: PF	KARRAS, A L	TBA	FR & BY CATEGORY

					Note: China's economic performance has impressed the world since the 1990's. However, the country's economic development has never been homogeneous or even. Understanding regional differentiation is crucial starting point for our understanding of China's transition as a whole. It may well also be crucial in answering the question of whether China's economic reforms are state-driven or market-driven. This seminar course explores how a variety of bottom-up economic and institutional experiments have reshaped China's different localities and driven the transition process forward.

					Note: "World of Commodities" – Whether it's sugar and the Atlantic system, cotton and the Industrial Revolution, or oil and globalization, commodities make the world go round. They are tools for studying global capitalism, allowing us to ask questions about the interlocking of politics and markets, about social organization, about the cultural contact and exchange, and about the nature of power and freedom. What is the relationship between production and consumption? How have commodity flows affected state sovereignty and empires? How have commodities led to the greater integration of markets and cultures?

					Note: "Twentieth-Century Europe: Decline or Renewal?" – At the onset of the twentieth century, Europe was the world's most prosperous continent, spreading its influence, for better or worse, around the globe. Two world wars then battered the continent and left its influence in doubt. Global supremacy moved to the United States and the Soviet Union. through the European community, the region regained its position of international economic leadership, but its existence, as current events have revealed, has never been secure. This course traces Europe's recent past and the challenges to its geopolitical status and to forging European unit.

Note: "Galicia in History and Imagination" – Taught in English. This course looks at Galicia as the homeland of Ukrainians, Poles, Austrians and Jews, tracing it's development from the late 18th century, when it was a province on the map, through the post-communist period, when Galicia has become a site of memory for all the communities there were once neighbors.
